

April 2017 Monthly Catalogue

Welcome to the April 2017 edition of the NHBS Monthly Catalogue, which lists all new titles added to our website in the last month.

For those interested in insects, there is a lot to look forward to. First off, beetles: New Naturalist Volume 136 (due November) will be on beetles – standing orders for this will be processed nearer the time. Meanwhile, NHP Borneo has just published A Guide to Beetles of Borneo, while the Czech publisher Academia has published another volume in its Zoological Keys series dealing with beetle families of Central Europe. NatureBureau has announced A Photographic Guide to Insects of Southern Europe and the Mediterranean for August, to be written by Paul Brock, who also authored their wildly successful Comprehensive Guide to Insects of Britain & Ireland. Lastly, Siri Scientific Press will publish a Field Guide to Butterflies of The Philippines in May.

But it doesn't stop there where invertebrates are concerned. Cambridge University Press has announced the second edition of Cephalopod Behaviour for September. With the help of a customer, we also discovered the existence of a large, bilingual photographic guide to Marine Invertebrates of Northwest Mexico, published last August, which we will stock.

Birdwatchers can look out for Shorebirds in Action (due July), written by Richard Chandler, which will introduce waders and their behaviour and the Guide to Seabirds of Southern Africa (due June). New Holland has announced Great British Birding Experiences (due July) which will compile a top 40 list of the best opportunities our Isles have to offer. But if you'd rather stay indoors, there are webcams trained on breeding peregrines in Exeter, and in August you can marvel at the winners of the second Bird Photographer of the Year competition.

For botanists, there will be several field guides to look out for: Field Guide to Trees of Britain and Europe (due August), London's Street Trees (due May), and another photographic guide to Wild Flowers of the Mediterranean (due April). Harper Collins has announced Orchids for May, which promises to be a combination of a field guide and an art book. From Germany comes a popular edition of the Greek Flora Graeca Sibthorpiana, presenting 250 drawings of the most common plants from the original 5-volume work. More scholarly in tone is the monograph The World of Crocuses.

Practising conservationists have several important works to consider adding to their bookshelves: Applied Wildlife Habitat Management, Mapping Ecosystem Services, and Scaling in Ecology and Biodiversity Conservation, the latter describing the challenges of conserving biodiversity across different spatial scales. Island Press has announced Marine Ecosystem-Based Management in Practice for May, which will be a collection of case studies and success stories. Chicago University Press has just published an incredibly interesting and revealing interdisciplinary history of overfishing with All the Boats on the Ocean, in which author Carmel Finley continues on earlier work. She shows how government subsidies instituted during the Cold War created a global fishing industry that has swept the oceans clean.

Palaeontologists and evolutionary biologists have some very exciting books lined up. Indiana University Press just published another volume in their Life of the Past series: Turtles as Hopeful Monsters: Origins and Evolution. Columbia University Press has announced Cataclysms: A New Geology for the Twenty-First Century (due September). Building on the work of the Alvarez team (who hypothesised a link between dinosaur extinction and an asteroid impact), this book further develops the geological school of thought of neocatastrophism, which places a greater emphasis on the role of cataclysms from above and below in Earth's geologic evolution. Improbable Destinies: Fate, Chance, and the Future of Evolution (due August), by stalwart Jonathan B. Losos, discusses the latest developments in evolutionary biology, looking at the relative importance of both convergence and chance events in evolution.

Ethologists will be interested in Mixed-Species Groups of Animals, due May, which offers the first book-length synthesis of the literature on the behaviour and community structure of these groups. Understanding Animal Behaviour (due August) will be more aimed at naturalists out in the field.

As always, if you are looking for a particular title that we do not yet have in our range, or you would like to suggest a title for NHBS to stock, please do get in touch.

Feral Pigs Going Hog-Wild in US. The wild hogs can now be found in three-fourths of U.S. states and their populations are growing in many areas and are estimated to cause $1.5 billion in damages each year, the Associated Press reports . There are currently more than 5 million wild hogs in the United States, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. 23 views · View 2 Upvoters.

Related Questions. What places in the US boast a decently large population of wild horses? The ratio of population size in any given year divided by the population size the previous year is 1.1. Two decades ago, somewhere between 500,000 and 2 million wild pigs roamed the United States, according to Jack Mayer, a national expert on the problem. Now the population numbers between 2 million and 6 million. In 1982, feral pigs were documented in 17 states. Today, they are found in 44. Source(s): <http://m.naplesnews.com/news/2009/dec/27> J Alves · 8 years ago. The largest wild pig populations are found in the South, but a team of scientists led by Nathan Snow found the pigs have been moving northward at a clip of 4 to 8 miles per year. In 30 to 50 years, Snow and his colleagues predict, wild pigs could be found living in all 50 states and every county in the country. Their conquest could happen even quicker if boars introduced into Canada continue to move southward. Wild pigs reproduce quickly and often, eat nearly anything and can survive in a variety of habitats. They also have no natural predators. The Eurasian wild boar, or Russian wild boar, Sus scrofa, was introduced to the United States in the 19th century for hunting. Today, wild invasive pigs consist of a combination of feral pigs, pure wild boars and hybrids of the two.
