The Renaissance was a period in which people started looking to the classical world (ancient Greece and Rome) with much admiration. When they looked at history, they considered the classical world to have been a time of greatness, and that the fall of the Roman Empire (c. 476 A.D.) led Europe into a period of decline which they called the "Dark Ages". Beginning in the fifteenth century, many Italians thought that by reviving the ideas, art, and architecture from antiquity, they could bring about a "rebirth" of greatness in their own cities. The result was the Renaissance, which is a word which
