It should be noted that in reality there is sometimes considerable and inevitable overlap. Second-language acquisition classroom research is an area of research in second-language acquisition concerned with how people learn languages in educational settings. There is a significant overlap between classroom research and language education. Classroom research is empirical, basing its findings on data and statistics wherever possible. It is also more concerned with what the learners do in the classroom than with what the teacher does. Where language teaching methods may only concentrate on the Instructed Second Language Acquisition: Learning in the Classroom. Oxford: Blackwell. has been cited by the following article: TITLE: Teachersâ€™TM Cognition about Teaching and Learning of Simple Past Tense: Can Processing Instruction Help? AUTHORS: Mable Chan. KEYWORDS: Simple Past Tense, Teachersâ€™TM Cognition, Processing Instruction.Â Findings show that teachersâ€™TM understanding of the nature of the acquisition problem of tense, and their use of teaching approach are instrumental in shaping studentsâ€™TM learning outcomes. What is fortunate is that they understand the need to improve the existing teaching approach which is too form-oriented. Unfortunately, they do not seem to have much knowledge about how to do so.
