Living with Disfigurement in Early Medieval Europe

By : Patricia Skinner

This book is open access under a CC-BY 4.0 license. This book examines social and medical responses to the disfigured face in early medieval Europe, arguing that the study of head and facial injuries can offer a new contribution to the history of early medieval medicine and culture, as well as exploring the language of violence and social interactions. Despite the prevalence of warfare and conflict in early medieval society, and a veritable industry of medieval historians studying it, there has in fact been very little attention paid to the subject of head wounds and facial damage in the course of war and/or punitive justice. The impact of acquired disfigurement—for the individual, and for her or his family and community—is barely registered, and only recently has there been any attempt to explore the question of how damaged tissue and bone might be treated medically or surgically. In the wake of new work on disability and the emotions in the medieval period, this study documents how acquired disfigurement is recorded across different geographical and chronological contexts in the period.

Wolfgang Koeppen

By : Christl Brink-Friederici

'Die Stadt als Pandämonium' setzt sich zum Ziel, die Affinität von Stadt und Roman an den Werken 'Tauben im Gras', 'Das Treibhaus' und 'Der Tod in Rom' von Wolfgang Koeppen aufzuzeigen. In jedem dieser Romane stellt die Stadt nicht nur Kulisse, Hintergrund, Symbol oder Motiv dar, sondern wird zum wesentlichen Bestandteil, zum konstituierenden Element des Textes. Von besonderer Wichtigkeit ist dabei die qualitative Komponente der Stadt: Einst Ort der persönlichen Freiheit des Menschen, verwandelt sie sich in den Nachkriegsromanen Koeppens in ein Pandämonium, das den Menschen in seiner Existenz bedroht.

Mr. Taylor plays a large scale cattle rancher whose living is being threatened by a Texas cartel who want to build a cattle highway from Texas to Canada. This would bring thousands of undesirable cattle to Mr. Taylor's Wyoming home. It's a nice twist on the old cattle ranchers vs. sheep herders story.
