SUBJECT GUIDE TO ARCHIVAL HOLDINGS IN NORTH EAST ENGLAND

INTRODUCTION

This Subject Guide is based on the holdings of nine of the major archives in the North East of England: Alnwick Archives, Beamish Museum Archives, Gateshead Central Library, Newcastle City Library, the Great North Museum Library, The Literary & Philosophical Society, the Northumberland Archives, Newcastle University's Robinson Library Special Collections, and Tyne & Wear Archives. Each of these have different rules of access and different opening times so ensure you have acquainted yourself with the details on the below websites.

Every effort has been made to cross-reference and direct users to other categories in which they might find other material relevant to their interests. Bear in mind that there is likely to be material that spans a number of categories (particularly, for example, general material relating to Newcastle upon Tyne and the North East), and checking all potentially relevant sections is advisable.

This guide is indicative, rather than comprehensive, and the intention was to give details of significant items of interest. If there is a particular subject or item you have in mind, contact the archivists for more information.

If you are new to working in archives, see the FAQs at the back of the Subject Guide.

The Subject Guide project was conceived and led by Dr Ruth Connolly and Dr Stacy Gillis (School of English Literature, Language & Linguistics). The work for this guide was funded by grants from the Newcastle Institute for Social Renewal (NISR), the School of History, Classics & Archaeology, the Gender Research Group and Medieval and Early Modern Studies Research Group (all at Newcastle University). The Subject Guide is a work in progress and will be updated as and when further project funding is available.

This version of the guide was compiled between January 2014 and March 2015 by Dr Stephanie Carter, Dr Katherine Cooper, Dr Emma Short, and Dr Beatrice Turner. Queries regarding the guide should be directed to the project coordinators, Dr Connolly (ruth.connolly@ncl.ac.uk) and Dr Gillis (stacy.gillis@ncl.ac.uk).

ART & CULTURE

Those interested in general cultural history should see also: Literature; Learned Societies; Newcastle upon Tyne; Reading & Literacy.

Art

The Alnwick Archive includes:

- DNA 2/F/101: A note of the pictures at Northumberland House, Syon House and Petworth. Taken by Mr Symon Stone, June and July 1671
- DNA 2/F/143/1-25: Picture list (Alnwick Castle), nineteenth-century

Note that these can only be viewed at Alnwick Castle.

Gateshead Central Library has examples of engravings by artists including Thomas Bewick. See Industry; Print, Publishing and Bookselling.

The Newcastle City Library archives hold several folders of exhibition posters and leaflets for both the Hatton Gallery and the Laing Art Gallery in Newcastle, dating from c.1990-c.2009, together with a range of catalogues for the Laing dating from 1904 to the present. See:

- L708.2 \(Size 3\): Hatton Gallery and Laing Art Gallery exhibition posters and leaflets (c.1990-c.2009).
- L708 \(Size 1\): Laing Art Gallery catalogues (1904-)
- L759.B572: William Berwick (artist) Life and Letters, 2 vols. (1871)

The Literary and Philosophical Society holds a range of periodicals which cover art, literature and culture. See also: Literature. Those pertaining specifically to art include:

- 705: The Magazine of Art, vols. 7-27 (1851-1900)

The Northumberland Archives hold the entire collection of work by Ashington Art Group, also known as the Pitmen Painters. See:

- ASHMM.1989.17: The Ashington Art Group Collection (1935-1955)

Cinema

Gateshead Central Library holds:

- Box 149: Scrapbooks of Fred Atkinson (manager) on the management of the Classic Cinema, Low Fell, in the 1980s.

The Newcastle City Library holds a wide range of material relating to cinema – and particularly early cinema – in Newcastle and the surrounding areas. These include:

- L791.4 \(Size 3\): Registers of Cinematograph Halls and Theatres.
- L791.4 \(Size 1\): ‘The Newcastle Picture House: A Few Particulars’. Printed leaflet, advertising opening on Wednesday 6 May 1914. - L791.4 (Size 1): Scrapbook of the history of cinemas in the North of England (including Cumbria) (1963). Contains photographs and technical details relating to individual cinemas.

The Northumberland Archives hold a few items relating to cinemas in Northumberland, including:

- NRO.55/150: K4 Petty Sessions re: Cinemas in Morpeth (1939-1956). These form part of the minutes from the licensing committee (1910-1974).
- NRO.1238/1-6: Printed papers concerning Ben-Hur. Includes: notices (4 copies) advertising Ben-Hur at King George Picture Hall, Cramlington (1928); 'Musical Suggestions for Ben-Hur' by John Reynolds, marked in ink (Thursday 17 December 1928).

Tyne & Wear Archives hold an extensive collection of material within the Wood Collection – in particular those items advertising variety concerts towards the end of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century – which will prove invaluable to those researching the emergence of cinema. Please note, however, that at least half of this collection is uncatalogued, and those requiring access will need to seek assistance from an archivist. There is also other material relating to cinema in the form of records of individual picture houses in the North East. See:

- B1501-H8227: The Wood Collection.
- DX86: Records of the Picture House, Jarrow (1919-1948)

Theatre

Gateshead Central Library holds a large amount of material relating to the Gateshead playwright Ruth Dodds. See:

- Box 099: Plays performed at the Little Theatre, many of which have the autograph of Ruth Dodds.
- Box 144: Collection of plays, poems, scripts and lecture notes belonging to Ruth Dodds.
- Box 145: Ruth Dodds' typescripts and namescripts with annotations.
- Box 152: Miscellaneous papers relating to Ruth Dodds, Gateshead playwright, twentieth century.

The Newcastle City Library holds a large amount of material relating to particular theatres in Newcastle upon Tyne, including daybills, playbills and programmes, as well as building plans and scripts. Items of interest include:

- L792.N536E (Size 3): Empire Theatre programmes (1902-1906)
- L792 (Size 3): Theatre Royal playbills (1786-1978)

- L792.N536G \(Size 1\): Grand Theatre, Byker, programme (1936)

The Northumberland Archives hold some items relating to theatre in Northumberland. Much of this can be found in the Davison Collection, which contains a significant number of theatre daybills and playbills, as well as individual items.

- BRO.0260: The Davison Collection. Posters promoting elections, rewards for stolen goods, shop and theatre advertisements, list of paupers in the Alnwick Union, notice from the Board of Health of Alnwick, Northumberland. All printed by W. Davison of Alnwick (c.1826-1850). Please note, this collection is held at Berwick Records Office.
- NRO.2236: Photocopy of theatre poster at Ridley Arms Inn, Blyth (1847)
- NRO.2989: Photocopy of playbill and copyprint/photograph of Harry Harvey, Tyneside comedian (Monday 19 December, n.d. [ca. early twentieth century]). Empress Theatre of Varieties, Hartlepool. Manager: Mr Albert Maxstead.

Tyne & Wear Archives hold a wide range of material relating to theatre in the North East of England from the late-eighteenth to mid-twentieth century, primarily in the Wood Collection. The collection is particularly relevant to those working on: regional variations of plays, and the popularity of particular plays in the North East in comparison to other regions; the rate of production and speed at which plays were produced and performed; theatrical adaptations of popular literary works in the mid- to late-nineteenth century; and the popularity of Victorian stage melodrama. The archives also contain a number of other items relating to nineteenth and twentieth-century theatre. At least half of this collection is uncatalogued. See:

- B1501-H8227: The Wood Collection.
- DX875/1: Jesmond Playhouse handbills (1940s)

Music

Beamish Museum holds a large collection of sheet music, particularly for pipe bands, in addition to a large amount of folk music collections and other general music albums and collections. Many relate to life in the North East and mining. Examples include:

- 784.49428: Northumbria Pipes Society: W. Cocks Collection, n.d. File box of photocopied sheet music.

Gateshead Central Library holds a large collection of 'Tyneside Songs' in their open access book catalogue. In addition, the library has:

- Box 069: Score, march 'Gateshead' composed by K. Livock for the Freedom of the Borough Ceremony, 1965.
- Box 069: 2 volumes of singing books belonging to William Beldon of Wylam, 1838.
- Box 071: Five manuscript volumes compiled by Robert Elliot Bewick (son of Thomas Bewick) of pipe music, 19C. There are pedagogical manuscript notes at the start of the fourth volume and pasted-in print cuttings of 'small pipe scales' and fingering. Manuscript notes at the back of the fifth volume relate to William Kennedy (died December 1834), a blind instrument-maker.
- Box 077: Scrapbook relating to A. Welford Todd, organ builder and tuner, Gateshead, 1909-10.
- Box 152: Miscellaneous papers relating to Felling Male Voice Choir.

The Newcastle City Library holds records and programmes of music festivals in Newcastle upon Tyne. The archives also hold volumes of local songs, for which see: Language, Dialect, Folklore & Songs.

- L042 (Size 3): Local tracts, 4 bound vols. Specifically Vol. II: Concerts & music festivals (c.1785-1890)
- L780-79 (Size 1): Newcastle Music Festivals – handbills & programmes (1791-1860)

Tyne & Wear Archives hold a number of playbills, daybills and programmes advertising musical & vocal concerts and operas in the Wood Collection. The Collection contains a number of programmes detailing the titles (and often the authors) of songs performed at musical and variety concerts, revealing the popularity of particular songs at specific moments, as well regional preferences. At least half of this collection is uncatalogued, and those requiring access will need to seek assistance from an archivist. See:

- B1501-H8227: The Wood Collection.

Photography

The Beamish Museum has a large collection of photographs (several thousand) relating to living and working in Tyne and Wear, Northumberland, and Yorkshire. The collection is particularly strong on images relating to mining and mining life, farming, and coastal life and trades. The collection dates from the nineteenth century but is strongest in twentieth-century items.

Gateshead Central Library holds a large collection of prints (including photographs and engravings) of life around Gateshead and County Durham c. 1850 onwards, including schools, churches, town band, memorials, railway stations, houses, estates, farms, miners, trade and manufacturing buildings, shopping, streets, floods, bridges, ships, people.

The Alnwick Archive is the archive of the Percy family, Earls and Dukes of Northumberland since 1377. It includes personal correspondence, journals and diaries, material relating to the estate and the Duchy of Northumberland and other material relevant to both the North East and to English history more generally. The archive ranges from the tenth to the twentieth centuries. Some of the material has been catalogued; see Appendix to the Third Report of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts (London: printed by George Edward Eyre and William Spottiswoode, printers to the Queen's most excellent Majesty. For Her Majesty's Stationery Office [H.M.S.O.], 1873). All the material listed in the 1873 Appendix is microfilmed and the films are held at the British Library. Permission to use these films can be obtained by writing to Chris Hunwick, the archivist at Alnwick. These microfilms should be used in preference to a visit to Alnwick as archive space there is limited and access to MSS difficult (and costly). Additional papers have been catalogued in Report on Miscellaneous Papers of the Duke of Northumberland from Syon House, Middlesex 1570-1956 (London: HMC, 1973) [known as Northumberland Miscellaneous (DNM)]. Other miscellaneous papers have the accession number DNA. Material with the DNM and DNA accession numbers has not been microfilmed and can only be viewed at Alnwick Castle. Examples of relevant items include:

- (no call number): Manuscripts and papers of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland at Alnwick Castle. Letters, MSS. and copies. Bound in 22 folio vols (1139-1696). Includes a 1384 treaty between the Earl of Northumberland and Douglas, an account of the arrest of Cardinal Wolsey, and several letters relating to the Civil War.
- (no call number): Alphabetical common-place book belonging to John Fitz-James. Paper. Small 4to. 17th century
- (no call number): A journal by Lady Hartford Jan-March 1741/2
- (no call number): 4to. 'letters (and verses) between Lady Pomfret and Lady Hartford (Sept. 1738-Sept. 1740), p. 327'
- DNA 2/G/11-16: Travel journals of Algernon, Lord Percy, covering Canada, France, Berlin/Amsterdam, Warsaw/Borodino, British Midlands, Rome, Naples, Tyrol, Austria, Scotland, Wales, Sweden, Denmark and Spain. Also includes the journal of Canon Singleton who accompanied him to Sweden and Denmark. 1808 - 1827.
- DNA J/73-81: Ballads/doggerel and occasional verse 1761-1955 (12 items)
- DNM/F/2/1: Journal of Lord Prudhoe on trip to Canada, 1841
- DNM/F/2/2: Journal of Henry Percy (7th Duke) 1859-1861

- SL172.1: R. Thomson, The loyall subject. Treating of Magistracy, Ministry, Religion, &c., Newcastle, 1660. According to the catalogue, there is a copy (Acc. No. 2480) that contains manuscript notes concerning the execution of Charles I, but this copy is presently lost.

For more information about the early printed books in the library's collection, see:

- L018.1: J. C. Day, A Short-Title Catalogue of the English and Continental Books (Pre 1700) in the General and Local Collections at Newcastle Central Library (1982)

In addition, the 'Local Tracts' collection contains c.200 volumes, mostly eighteenth- and nineteenth-century locally-printed tracts, bound alphabetically by subject.

The Literary & Philosophical Society holds a number of volumes on the art of bookmaking and bookselling, bibliography, and cataloguing, as well as on general book history. These include:

- 010.3: A Bibliographical Dictionary; containing a chronological account, alphabetically arranged, of the most curious, scarce, useful, and important books, in all departments of literature. From the infancy of printing to the beginning of the nineteenth century. With biographical anecdotes of authors, printers and publishers. 6 vols. (1802-1804) & 2 vol. supplement (1806).

- 010.8: The Gentleman's Magazine Library. 2 vols. (1888-1889). Preface states: 'The Gentleman's Magazine was always open to contributions on almost any branch of literary history or curiosity.' Vol. I: 'Literary Curiosities and Notes' – contents include: bookmaking & bookselling; libraries & book clubs; bibles, prayer-books and devotional books. Vol. II: 'Bibliographical Notes' – contents include: 'notes on special books'; 'special subjects'.
- 015.42: The London Catalogue of Books (1805-1849); then The English Catalogue of Books (1850-1947)

The Northumberland Archives is home to the Davison Collection, a collection of approximately 4,500 printers' proofs from W. Davison Printers of Alnwick, in addition to other material relating to the book trade:

- BRO.0260: The Davison Collection. Posters promoting elections, rewards for stolen goods, shop and theatre advertisements, list of paupers in the Alnwick Union, notice from the Board of Health of Alnwick, Northumberland. All printed by W. Davison of Alnwick (c.1826-1850).
- SANT/BEQ/22: Papers of John Oxberry (1857-1940). MSS, newspaper cuttings, pictures including Oxberry's research on history of printing and bookselling in Newcastle
- SANT/GUI/NCL/2/1: Records of the Booksellers Company of Newcastle upon Tyne, Minutes and Accounts 1801 – 1822

Robinson Library Special Collections holds the libraries of sixteenth- and seventeenth-century grammar schools, and some of these collections contain rare examples of binding. See also: Education. It also holds the Pybus Papers, including material relating to Pybus' interest in book-collecting:

- Pybus papers, Box 11: Correspondence. MS letters from book sellers in England and abroad, newspaper cuttings from book booksellers and printers giving some information about books, some sale records, an annotated bibliography of books(different subjects), information about foreign printers (for instance French) and printing methods.

The Bell (John and Thomas) Collection contains 4 boxes of material relating to the local book trade (nineteenth century). A typescript catalogue detailing some of the collection items may be consulted in the Special Collections Reading Room.

Tyne & Wear Archives hold the records of the Wilson family, who ran bookbinding business on Nelson Street, Newcastle upon Tyne, and later in St Thomas' Street. It also holds the Wood Collection, an extensive collection of printing proofs spanning from May 1782-April 1944, and the papers of Thomas Dixon (1831-1880) which include correspondence about and with booksellers.

- DX597: Wilson family, Newcastle – records (1678-1900).
- L/PA/1754: Papers of Thomas and Alice Broad, Parliamentary Printers of York (1644)
- B1501-H8227: The Wood Collection. A variety of cultural forms are represented within the Wood Collection, the most numerous of which are the plays, variety concerts, musical concerts and film showings detailed in the daybills, playbills, handbills and posters in the Collection. Other cultural forms featured include opera, ballet, drawing-room entertainment, educational or informative events such as lectures and exhibitions, sporting events such as cricket and football matches, and circuses. There are a small number of items relating to cultural forms that invited an increased level of participation from those attending, such as sports days, beauty pageants, miscellaneous competitions and picnics. There are a few posters advertising sea excursions and regattas. The earliest item in the Wood Collection dates from May 1782 (a playbill of The Moor's Revenge, or, Spanish Insult Repaid), and the latest dates from April 1944 (a handbill for a variety concert). However, the majority of items in the Collection fall within the period 1830-1920, with a particularly high concentration of items between 1850 and 1910. The majority of the items in the Collection are from the Hartlepool printing firm John Procter & Sons, and, as a result, a great deal of these items are for venues in the Hartlepool area. However, other locations do feature in the Collection, primarily those in and around the North East of England. Please note that at least half of this collection is uncatalogued, and those requiring access will need to seek assistance from an archivist.

- 717/49-81: Papers of Thomas Dixon. Letters. MS 32 items. Written 1866-1880 from Edward Pearson (from London) concerning lists of chapbooks, children's books, and local book dealers.

READING & LITERACY

Libraries

Beamish Museum holds at least two ex-lending library collections: the Eldon Lane Working Man's Club and Institute, and the Westgate Subscription Library. Both appear to be early-mid twentieth century. The collections have been broken up and dispersed among the appropriate subjects so it is difficult to gain a sense of how large the collections were or if the museum holds any others. The most numerous or popular categories represented in these libraries (judging by the number of library bookplates found) were children's literature and popular fiction (especially romance and detective novels), and hobby literature (beekeeping, wine-making, gardening, etc.).

Gateshead Central Library holds the following material relating to public libraries in County Durham:

- Box 038-039 and Box 076: Papers relating to Birtley Library, 1929-1956
- Box 069: Manuscript notebook containing contact details of members of the Gateshead Library Committees, 1924-1946
- Box 075: Durham County Council Libraries Sub-Committee, Minutes 1965-73.
- Box 078: Correspondence of Lord Attlee (1883-1967) regarding memento book of visit to Felling in 1960, and related newspaper cuttings of visit.

Newcastle City Library archives hold a particularly comprehensive selection of materials on local libraries in and around the city centre. The Newcastle City Library is also home to the Thomlinson Library, the collection of books donated to the first public library in Newcastle – located in St Nicholas' Cathedral (established c.1680) – by Dr Robert Thomlinson, Rector of Whickham, in 1736. These books, dating from as early as c.1580, are available to view on request (many of them are in currently in a poor state of conservation). See the Thomlinson Library collection on the library's website. See also: Religious & Charitable Organisations.

Other items of interest on libraries held in the Newcastle City Library archives include:

- L.027.4 (Size 1): Libraries – Several folders containing material related to libraries in and around Newcastle upon Tyne. Folders include: documents relating to closures; building plans; press cuttings about openings; stock books, etc. (1904-present)

FAQs

These FAQs were written by Dr Katherine Cooper for those who are new to using archives.

What is an archive?

An archive is a collection of historical documents or records. To archive something means to hold it or to store it for the purposes of preservation. Part of an archive's remit is to be accessible to the public but some materials may be embargoed, meaning that they are not available for viewing until a certain length of time has passed. This is often relates to personal materials, and is often either to protect people who may be mentioned in the material or to safeguard sensitive information.

Why should I use an archive in my research?

Archive material (photographs, objects, letters, diaries, logbooks, censuses, minute books, etc.) can provide essential material, not only supporting your research questions but often setting it apart as a real advancement of knowledge in a particular field.

How do I decide which archive to use?

Use the National Archives website (<http://www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/>) to search holdings at multiple archives. Do also search the catalogues for individual archives (each catalogue may privilege different items) and do contact the archives directly (bearing in mind that it may take several weeks or even months to hear back from an archive as they will have multiple queries).

How do I prepare for my visit to the archive?

Before visiting the archive, look carefully at their webpages. Check opening hours (some archives are open only for a brief time each day) and policies on access to materials. Will you be able to access everything? Is there a search room? Is the archive even open to the public? Do you need to make special arrangements to see certain materials? Try to work out how much material there is and plan how much material you may be able to get through each day. If there is a lot of material or you are pushed for time, look at material in order of importance. Many archives store material off-site. If this is the case you may have to give around 24 to 48 hours' notice to view it (check this on the website or with the archivist) and/or send through a list of materials so that there are items to look at when you arrive. Even if this is not the case, it is often a good idea to email and introduce yourself ahead of your visit and to ask for some materials to be laid out for your arrival so that you can get started straight away. Ensure that you look up each item and send as much detail as possible (ideally, the shelfmark, the full catalogue number, the name of the collection, and the name of the item). This will help the archivist to find them and make sure that they are favourably disposed towards you before you arrive.

What should I take?

Most archives will only let you in the search room with pencils so you should take lots of these, (preferably sharpened!). Even if the archive does not specify this it is good practice. Many archives also insist that you use only loose sheets of paper so plan ahead. The vast majority will permit computers. This should all be verified via the website or with the archivist before your visit. It is also a good idea to check on the photography policy – many archives no longer do photocopies but will sell you a pass or license to take your own in the search room with a phone or camera. Finally and most importantly, you will need some form of ID (e.g. a driver's license, student card or passport) and, perhaps, a letter of recommendation from your supervisor or home university. This, again, is worth checking on the website or with the archivist before your visit. And take some change for the lockers!

What should I do when I get there?

The first thing will be to fill out forms to identify who you are and your reasons for accessing the materials. You will then be given a pass for the search room. Bags/coats will probably have to be left outside in lockers. Once in the search room, it is good form to make yourself known to the archivist. If you have emailed ahead you can collect any materials they have prepared for you but if not, this is a great opportunity to briefly outline your research and what you are looking for. The archivist is there to help you but is probably very busy. Always be polite and allow for the fact that they may have a number of other people with whom to deal. The archivist's knowledge of the collection is often the key to completing your research, helping you to navigate the electronic and card catalogues and providing their own insight into the collections. Always stay on the right side of the archivist! If the archivist is busy and it seems unclear where to start, go to the online catalogue and enter your search terms. If your research is more general you may find it useful to ask if there is a handlist (a big folder listing everything that is held in the archive) or have a look through the card catalogue.

Should I wear gloves?

Some archives will insist that you wear gloves for handling certain materials, but these will be brought to you along with the materials. For most items you should just make sure that your hands are clean and that you handle them with care. If you find that an item is particularly fragile or in poor condition, bring this to the archivist's attention. They may be able to bring you some supports which will help you to look at the item without damaging it.

- Never write on items in an archive.
- Even if you are ostensibly allowed to you should not eat or drink around archive materials.
- You should never use a pen or biro around archive materials.

What should I do whilst waiting?

You can spend a great deal of time waiting for materials to be brought out of the archive. Be patient. Use the time to check through your notes, and that your documents are properly organised. Make a list of materials still to view or any items which you would like to see which are referred to in the material you've looked at already. You can search the catalogue but should make sure that the staff know where you are when the material does arrive.

What is the most important thing about archive work?

Keep track of where every item came from. When you first receive an item you should write down the box number, folder number, item number, title, author, date – all information which can help to identify that item – at the top of your page. Before you send anything back ensure that you have written down every identifying feature of the item because it is easy to miss something when things first arrive at your desk. Even if the multitude of information seems unnecessary to a reference, write it down anyway. It is far better to have too much information than not enough and there is nothing so disappointing as realising that you cannot use an excellent quotation or photograph because you do not have the proper reference.

What should I do when I leave?

When you leave, take all material back to the desk. Most archives will not let you have more than a few items at a time and it is good practice to work through the material one thing at a time, returning each item to the desk before moving onto the next. At the end of the day read through your notes, work out what you would like to look at the next day (if you are coming back), check that you have reference numbers and that you have not left anything out, and finally file your notes away. It is very easy to come home with a handful or unrelated sheaves of paper in no particular order – you may wish to catalogue your notes by subject, the day you took them or the part of your project to which they relate. Most importantly, have a system.
