The Overseas Trade of London Exchequer Customs Accounts 1480-1, ed. H. S. Cobb, London Record Society 27 (London, 1990). Prints an English translation of the controller's petty customs account for 29 September 1480 to 28 September 1481. Petty customs was a national tax on the value of imports and exports (except for wine, wool, and hides) by alien merchants and cloth exports by alien and denizen merchants. The controller was a royal official appointed to check the accounts of the actual collectors (whose account does not survive for this year). London Record Society. In this paper a short extract from the Latin/English Petty Customs Account Roll, Port of London, 1481, is analysed. This account roll details commodities brought to the Port of London by Hanseatic and non-Hanseatic merchants. It contains words of Latin, Anglo-Norman, Low German and English etymology, with Latin occurring in all parts of speech, and the other languages restricted to nouns and adjectives only.
