Luke is the solitary Gentile writer of the Bible, yet his dual books of the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts constitute about one-fourth of the New Testament. By training he was a physician (Col. 4:14).Â Luke provides first-rate testimony for the genuineness of Jesusâ€™ miracles. A scientist by profession, he had thoroughly investigated the claims of Christâ€™s supernatural works (he mentions twenty of them, six of which are unique to him), and he treats them as historical reality.Â The present tense of the verbs marks the progress of the journey. Obviously, therefore, John was describing the early part of the trip (during the dark), which may have involved a considerable distance, whereas Mark speaks of the latter portion of the journey (after sunrise). There is no discrepancy! When Jesus reads in the synagogue in our gospel reading on 27 Jan, it is as if Luke is saying to us: â€œif you want to understand Jesus and his mission, this is where you must beginâ€™.Â This infancy story is a mini-gospel in itself in so far as it discloses the identity of Jesus and offers us examples of true discipleship. For instance, we learn from the words of the angel to the shepherds who Jesus was; he was Saviour, Christ and Lord (2:11). Mary, the mother of Jesus, teaches us how to be a disciple when she says to Gabriel, â€œBe it done to me according to your wordâ€™ (1:38) and we meet also a procession of minor disciples, like Zechariah and Elizabeth before the birth of Jesus, the shepherds at his birth, and Simeon and Anna after it.
